COAST TO COAST AIR SERVICE IS PLANNED

48 HOURS ALL TIME NEEDED TO CROSS U. S.

Gigantic Five Million Corporation Is Formulating Plans

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, May 15.—Forty-eight hour service from coast to coast for the traveling public of the United States will soon be a reality. Announcement is imminent, it became known today, of the organization of a transcontinental air and railroad system, capitalized at $5,000,000, which will undertake to cut down the time it now takes to cross the country.

Linked in the new organization are the Pennsylvania railroad, the Atchison Topeka and Santa Fe railroad. The national air transport and the Boeing and Western Air Transport companies. The object of the company will be to provide a regular forty-eight-to-fifty-two hour passenger service from New York to San Francisco. The regular schedule from New York to Los Angeles will require forty-eight hours. Later the service is to be extended to San Francisco.

Passengers will be carried on trains at night and on planes in the daytime.

The new train-plane organization will be headed by C. M. Keys, president of the Curtiss Aeroplane and Motor company. Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh was approached to head the company when it was in a formative stage but declined. It is understood that he explained that while he saw in such a combination of services the swift advancement of aviation he reiterated his frequently expressed intention of not becoming financially interested in any individual aircraft company, at least not for the present.

Present plans call for the following method of traveling: passengers bound for the west coast will entrain from New York to Columbus, Ohio, fly from there to Wichita, Kansas, sleep on a train to a point in New Mexico, and then fly to Los Angeles. Plane-train service from Columbus to points south and northwest is planned as soon as the trans-continental route is established.

Financing of the new company is in the hands of Hayden, Stone & company, Blair & company, Knight Glamble & Dysart of St. Louis, J. C. Willson of Louisville and other Banking houses.

The standard scheduled time for the transportation of air mail across the United States today is thirty-one hours. It is upon this swift service that the new traffic service is to be built up.

CHILLICOTHE'S CLUB BULLETIN LAUDS MEETING

Inter-City Rotary Gathering At Circleville Is "Written Up"

"The Interpreter", weekly bulletin of the Rotary club of Chillicothe, praises the inter-city Rotary meeting held in Circleville at the C. A. C. last week.

The "write up" in the paper follows:

Just back from the Inter-city meeting at Circleville and the fifty Rotarians who went up had a real trip and a splendid time.

The meeting was held in the C. A. C. hall and the dinner was served by the Ladies' Aid Society of the First Methodist church. Quick service and a real service of chicken and all that goes with it.

Club singing was led by Karl Herrmann who got all his musical training up in Goosetown before he went to Circleville.

The music of the evening was varied with a real orchestra from Lancaster, a Glee club made up of the members of Washington C. H. and a quintette from Greenfield but the palm must go to the talent from the town of Circleville, especially the Monday Club quartette and the solo singing of Miss Helen Marion who has been heard many times in Chillicothe.

As our contribution Bill McNeills held the crowd with his inimitable humor and pleased every one with his short talk "Leave it to Bill"

Governor Frank Beggs was present as also was the District Governor Bob Hughes. Both made short talks.

The address of the evening was given by Charles D Simerall, the Third District Governor of the 22nd District.

Just a while before the meeting closed a splendid Rotary Edition of the Circleville Herald was passed to every visitor with the compliments of the publishers.

All in all a very fine meeting, well put on and manage d by the Circleville club and with Clark Wills presiding everything went off smoothly.

These Inter-city meetings are always worth while and as several of our Rotarians remarked its about time for Chillicothe to show what she can do in having a visitation of Rotarians.

SEEK BODIES OF 12 DROWN IN BIG LAKE

Nine Prominent Citizens And Three Guides Die When Launch Sinks

GREENVILLE, Me., May 15.—Bodies of nine prominent citizens of Brockton, Mass., and their Maine woods guide were sought in the lower reaches of Moosehead lake today by Sheriff A. G. Rodgers and a party of searchers in a motorboat.

Grief-stricken relatives of the men, who had come here by airplane, automobile and train, waited patiently to receive all that was mortal of their loved ones—lost in the sinking of a motor launch.

Meanwhile, the lone survivor of the expedition of amateur salmon fishermen, Captain James E. Lays of the Brockton police department, told of the terrible north woods tragedy.

Exhausted, but believed on the road to recovery, his right arm still numb from contact with the frigid water, Captain Lays described the frantic efforts to clear the motorboat of water, the call of the skipper to "get out the life preservers" and how he and Dr. David Bridgwood, eye and ear specialist of Brockton, attempted what they believed was an act of sacrifice—a leap overboard to lighten the fast-sinking craft.

Besides Dr. Bridgwood, last seen by Captain Lays swimming shoreward, the lost were: Fire Chief William F. Daley, of Brockton; Sheriff Earl P. Blake, of Plymouth county, Mass.; Dr. Arthur F. Peterson, former Brockton city physician; John Sandberg, manufacturer, of Brockton; Dr. Frank Moberg of Brockton; Fred Dahlberg, highway commissioner of Brockton; ex-Mayor Harry C. Howard, of Brockton; Knute S. Salander, Brockton business man, and Sam Buddin, of this town, Maine woods guide and skipper of the ill-fated lake craft.

Shores of Moosehead had been combed but only the overcoats and sweaters of the men, together with a piece of the boat were found—these off Sandbar Island. Lakemen said that because of the coldness of the water, which was nearly 100 feet deep where the motorboat capsized, it was not expected that the bodies would come to the surface for ten or fifteen days.

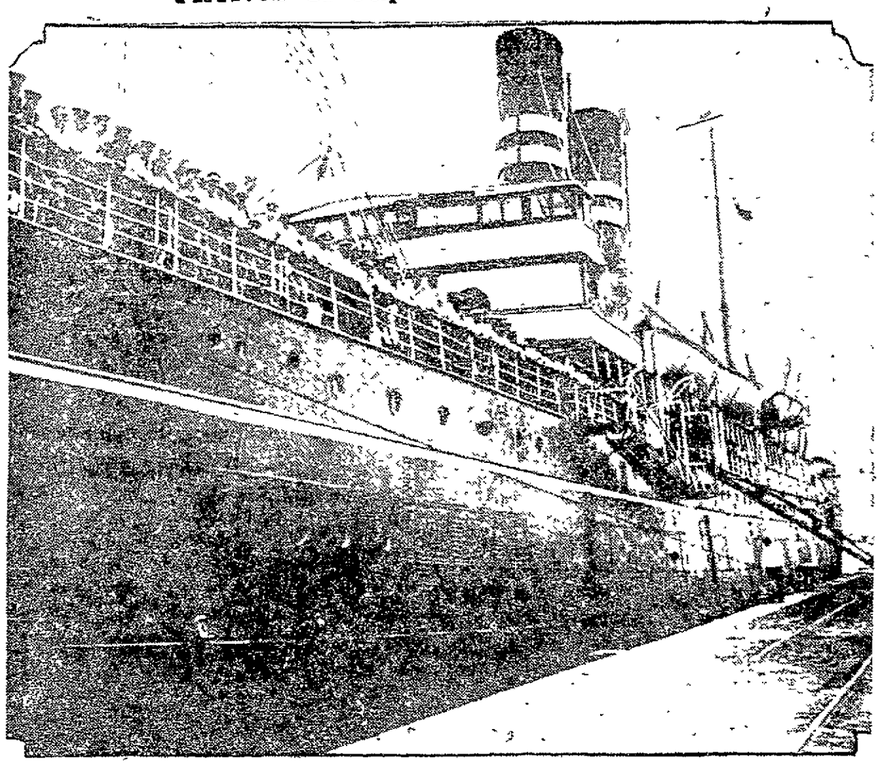
Arrival of Japanese Soldiers in China



At the first sign of war clouds, nearly a year ago, the Japanese transport Hongkong Maru is shown above as she steamed into Tsingtao with the first contingent of Japanese soldiers. On landing, they took over the town and later captured Tsinan. The presence of Japanese troops in those places has been a constant thorn in the side of the Nationalist government and the recent killing of Japanese soldiers at Tsinan, presumably by Nationalist forces, is largely responsible for the present crisis. With Japanese reinforcements moving steadily in the Tsingtao and Tsinan region, telegraph and telephone communication between the two cities has been restored.

THREE OTHERS BURNED WHILE MANY ESCAPE

Hilda Sipe, Freshman, Victim Of Early Morning Fire At Wittenberg

SPRINGFIELD, O., May 15.—One co-ed was burned to death, and three others slightly injured, in an early morning spectacular fire which partially destroyed the Woodlawn Hall, small dormitory which houses 22 young women, on the campus of the Wittenberg College here.

Hilda Sipe, freshman, of Shelby, Ohio, was burned to death when she failed to escape from the burning building. College authorities expressed the belief that Miss Sipe fainted when trying to escape. The body was recovered by firemen.

Miss Mary Levengood, of Reading, Pa., suffered a broken arm when she stumbled as she was fleeing from the blazing hall. She is confined in the university hospital.

Miss Helen MacClaim, daughter of former Mayor John MacClaim, Troy, Ohio, sprained both legs when she half-slid and half-jumped down the fire escape leading from a second story window.

The students fled from the structure partially clothed.

Starts About 2 A. M.

Other buildings on the campus were deserted when the fire broke out and the reports circulated that Miss Sipe was in the burning building. It was with difficulty that firemen restrained some of the men students in going in search of the victim.

The fire was discovered about two o'clock. It is believed to have started in the Public reception hall of the dormitory. Authorities or firemen could place no theory as to the origin of the fatal blaze.

Though the whole student body crowded around the burning hall no evidence of excitement of hysteria were manifested, even by the women students.

Inhaled Fumes

Miss Sipe was said to have died from inhaling the flames. The young women was taking a teacher training course at the college. After the body was removed by firemen it was immediately taken to a funeral home in the city from where it will be sent to Shelby, according to college authorities.

All of the other young ladies escaped through the windows. Some are reported to have jumped from the second story, but no serious injuries resulting from accident of this kind were reported.

Loss to the building was estimated at $12,000. It is partially covered by insurance.

Meanwhile, the lone survivor of the expedition of amateur salmon fishermen, Captain James E. Lays of the Brockton police department, told of the terrible north [illegible] tragedy.

Exhausted, but believed on the road to recovery, his right arm still numb from contact with the frigid water, Captain Lays described the frantic efforts to clear the motorboat of water, the call of the skipper to "get out the life preservers" and how he and Dr. David Bridgwood, eye and ear specialist of Brockton, attempted what they believed was an act of sacrifice—a leap overboard to lighten the fast-sinking craft.

Besides Dr. Bridgwood, last seen by Captain Lays swimming shoreward, the lost were: Fire Chief William F. Daley, of Brockton; Sheriff Earl P. Blake, of Plymouth county, Mass.; Dr. Arthur F .Peterson, former Brockton city physician; John Sandberg, manufacturer, of Brockton; Dr. Frank Moberg of Brockton; Fred Dahlberg, highway commissioner of Brockton; ex-Mayor Harry C. Howard, of Brockton; Knute S. Salander, Brockton business man, and Sam Buddin, of this town, Maine woods guide and skipper of the ill-fated lake craft.

Shores of Moosehead had been combed but only the overcoats and sweaters of the men, together with a piece of the boat were found—these off Sandbar Island. Lakemen said that because of the coldness of the water, which was nearly 100 feet deep where the motorboat capsized, it was not expected that the bodies would come to the surface for ten or fifteen days.

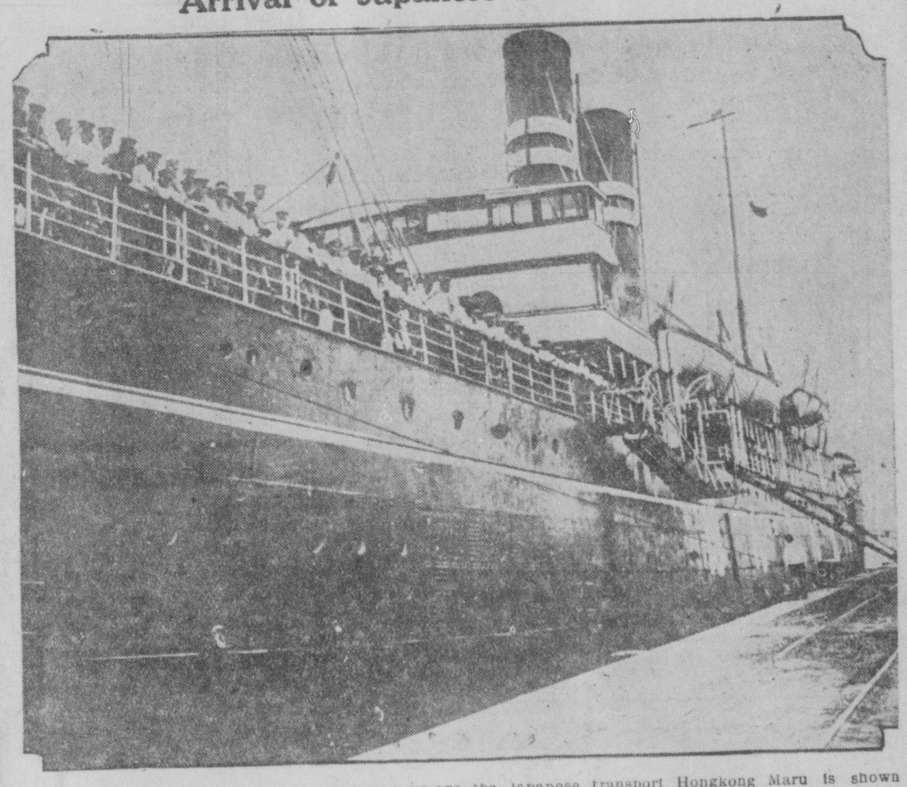
Arrival of Japanese Soldiers in China



At the first sign of war clouds, nearly a year ago, the Japanese transport Hongkong Maru is shown above as she steamed into Tsingtao with the first contingent of Japanese soldiers. On landing, they took over the town and later captured Tsinan. The presence of Japanese troops in those places has been a constant thorn in the side of the Nationalist government and the recent killing of Japanese soldiers at Tsinan, presumably by Nationalist forces, is largely responsible for the present crisis. With Japanese reinforcements moving steadily in the Tsingtao and Tsinan region, telegraph and telephone communication between the two cities has been restored.

THREE OTHERS BURNED WHILE MANY ESCAPE

Hilda Sipe, Freshman, Victim Of Early Morning Fire At Wittenberg

SPRINGFIELD, O., May 15.—One co-ed was burned to death, and three others slightly injured, in an early morning spectacular fire which partially destroyed the Woodlawn Hall, small dormitory which houses 22 young women, on the campus of the Wittenberg College here.

Hilda Sipe, freshman, of Shelby, Ohio, was burned to death when she failed to escape from the burning building. College authorities expressed the belief that Miss Sipe fainted when trying to escape. The body was recovered by firemen.

Miss Mary Levengood, of Reading, Pa., suffered a broken arm when she stumbled as she was fleeing from the blazing hall. She is confined in the university hospital.

Miss Helen MacClaim, daughter of former Mayor John MacClaim, Troy, Ohio, sprained both legs when she half-slid and half-jumped down the fire escape leading from a second story window.

The students fled from the structure partially clothed.

Starts About 2 A. M.

Other buildings on the campus were deserted when the fire broke out and the reports circulated that Miss Sipe was in the burning building. It was with difficulty that firemen restrained some of the men students in going in search of the victim.

The fire was discovered about two o'clock. It is believed to have started in the Public reception hall of the dormitory. Authorities or firemen could place no theory as to the origin of the fatal blaze.

Though the whole student body crowded around the burning hall no evidence of excitement of hysteria were manifested, even by the women students.

Inhaled Fumes

Miss Sipe was said to have died from inhaling the flames. The young women was taking a teacher training course at the college. After the body was removed by firemen it was immediately taken to a funeral home in the city from where it will be sent to Shelby, according to college authorities.

All of the other young ladies escaped through the windows. Some are reported to have jumped from the second story, but no serious injuries resulting from accident of this kind were reported.

Loss to the building was estimated at $12,000. It is partially covered by insurance.

Henry Ford May Prefer the Waltz, but Jazz Has Friends

DANCING FOR ITSELF, THAT'S WHAT COUNTS

Winifred Black Loves "The Blue Danube" Just as Much as Ever But She's Not Against These New Things.

By WINIFRED BLACK

NO jazz music on the ship that Henry Ford was on. Not a single bit of jazz after the first day out.

Every night there was a dance and Henry Ford and his wife showed the young people how to dance, if you please. No jazz steps, thank you. Just the waltz and the polka and the schottische, don't you know. Two steps this way and two that and a kind of a half courtesy. Ask your grandmother, she will show you. Not so awfully bad, either, when you come to that.

WINIFRED BLACK

But oh that polka, such an awful, jerky affair!

And the old-fashioned waltz, I would like to see Henry Ford or anybody else teach that to a roomful of 1928-ers. He would have his hands and his feet mighty busy I am here to remark. You can't just walk the old-fashioned waltz, you have to dance, and you have to know how to dance, allow me to remark. A good waltzer is born only about once in a thousand, and then the good waltzer has to learn to waltz—at that.

No one, two, three, four! Nothing so easy as that, thanks.

And dear Mr. Ford, don't you remember when it was considered very naughty indeed to waltz? Didn't Byron, the wicked English poet, write some rather risky rhymes about the amorous waltz—dear, dear, I am surprised at you!

And how ever did the musicians know what to play? Let's see—the Blue Danube, the Siren Waltz, Peek-a-Boo, I see You, After the Ball, The Sidewalks of New York, Sweet Rosie O'Grady and When the Leaves Begin to Turn.

I suppose you did sandwich in Let Me Call You Sweetheart and the Indian Love Call from Rose Marie and Why Do I Love You, Why Do You Love Me—just for luck, didn't you? For goodness sake, why didn't you want the young folks to do their own kind of dancing?

What's wrong with jazz anyhow? Don't you like to "Climb the Highest Mountain and Swim the Deepest Sea?" There's nothing wrong about that jazz song, is there? It tells the same old story and it tells it rather nicely, if you ask me, so why turn back the hands of the clock?

The old-fashioned dances are all right, but what's the matter with the new ones? Jazz is the music of the age and the world beats time to the swing of the great pendulum. Why not swing with it and get all the fun there is out of it?

"Yes, She's My Baby," may not be anything like "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms," but it means just about the same thing, after all.

Jazz is the American music, you get tired of it sometimes but go abroad for a year and you will want to keep step to the first jazz step you hear after you come down the gang-plank.

Hurrah for the old-fashioned dances, and three times three for the new ones! There isn't half enough dancing in the world; from my point of view I wish the old earth would swing round and round to the lilt of the gayest, friendliest, most natural music in the world—and keep right on swinging it.

KEEPING THE BREATH FREE FROM OFFENSE

Bad Odors May Be Due to Imperfect Digestion, Catarrh or Decayed Teeth, All of Which Can Be Treated.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

THERE are two things which we like to dodge. Fortunately, one of these—snoring—is practiced in seclusion. On this account we do not run amuck of it except on a sleeping car, or in a thinly partitioned Summer cottage.

But the other—bad breath—we cannot escape. A clerk in the store, a neighbor in the street car, a fellow pupil in school, and even the doctor or the lawyer may be afflicted. Hardly a day passes but from some casual contact each of us must endure at least a passing whiff of bad breath.

Many persons are painfully conscious of their own affliction. They dread to face people and may even avoid all social indulgence, because they know they have bad breath.

There are several causes for offensive breath. All of them relate to the nose, mouth and digestive tract.

Taking these organs in the order mentioned, we find that certain types of catarrh may impregnate the breath with disagreeable odors. One disease of this sort is known as "dry catarrh." Crusts and scabs form in the nose. These become the breeding place of germs and fermentation. As the material decays it becomes very offensive.

To get rid of bad breath due to catarrh there must be appropriate treatment of the nose and of the cavities, known as the nasal sinuses, which open into the nose. Special care is needed in such cases.

Decayed teeth and pus-infected tonsils are other causes for this trouble. No sensible person will neglect disturbance of mouth or throat. It is not alone to make the breath sweet that attention should be given to such defects. It should be given to guard the general health and even the very life.

Indigestion, especially those forms of indigestion associated with habitual constipation, is one of the most common causes for bad breath. A healthy baby is as sweet as a rose and the breath of a well child is like new mown hay. Let a baby or an older child suffer from gastric fermentation or constipation and the breath becomes offensive.

The last factor I shall mention is one rarely included among the causes of this disagreeable symptom. I refer to a heavily coated and offensive tongue.

Some persons have rough tongues, with very uneven surfacing. Food debris and bacterial growth lead to decay and offensive odor. Scrape the tongue with the bowl of an inverted spoon, a piece of whalebone, or a special tongue scraper. You will be surprised at the quantity of material you remove.

Keep the teeth clean. Scrape the tongue daily. Wash out the mouth and gargle the throat with some pleasing solution. With these precautions you should have sweet breath.

GOOD-NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silver

Why Ground Squirrel Wears Stripes.

ONCE upon a time—long, long ago—there lived out in the woods in a little burrow under the ground, a family of squirrels.

They were a happy little family, excepting one little fellow called Sammy Squirrel. He would never mind his mama unless she was watching him. He always tried to get out of helping fill the store rooms, for like all of his relatives, Sammy Squirrel and his Mama and Daddy and Sisters and brothers all filled their store room with nuts, acorns and seeds in the Fall, so if they happened to awaken any time during the Winter months, they would have something to eat.

Instead of helping his Mama and Daddy like his other brothers and sisters did, Sammy Squirrel would race over the meadows playing with the butterflies, grasshoppers and turtles. He hated to work and one day when his Mama asked him if he did not think it was about time for him to build a home of his own, Sammy Squirrel became quite peeved and ran away from home.

When night came he was very hungry and tired. He hadn't thought to fill the little pockets in his cheek in the daytime, and now it was growing dark, and Sammy Squirrel had nothing to eat and he was terribly hungry. He sat down and began to cry bitterly.

"Oh, I do wish, I hadn't run away from home," he sobbed. "I'm so hungry and I don't know which way to go to get any food."

Just then Sammy Squirrel heard a rustle among the leaves of the bushes over him. He saw a bird fly away from a nest that was tucked among the leaves and a thought came to Sammy Squirrel.

He wiped his eyes with his little red bandana handkerchief and before you could say, "scat" Sammy Squirrel had climbed the bush and was leaning over the bird's nest, just ready to help himself to a lovely baby bird when he happened to look up. There, on every thorn on the bush, hung some kind of a tiny animal.

From one thorn dangled a grasshopper, on another hung a little field mousie, two big beetles hung from another thorn. Sammy Squirrel let the baby bird drop back into its nest and without thinking where he was, for Sammy Squirrel very seldom ever climbed so far from the ground, he let go his hold on the branch, and down, down down, he fell to the ground below. Every thorn he passed on the way down tore a great rip in his pretty fur suit and when he reached the round, Sammy Squirrel jumped up and ran back home as fast as he could go.

His Mama didn't scold him when she saw him coming. She knew by the sad look on his face, that Sammy Squirrel had had punishment enough. She opened the door and pulled him inside.

It took her some little time mending up the ripped suit for there were exactly thirteen ripped places down his little fur coat.

But when Sammy Squirrel told her what he had seen in the thorn tree, his Mama had to laugh.

"Well, that was Mr. Shirk's house," she laughed. "And had you found him at home, you might have been dangling from one of the thorns, for he is the butcher bird of Birdville and if I were you, I'd stay on the ground from now on. You are a Ground Squirrel and shouldn't run up trees to eat baby birds."

Needless to say, that was the last time Sammy Squirrel ever visited any birds' nests. He learned to love to hunt his food and maybe some day when you're passing through the woods, you might see him sitting on the ground beside his own doorway. He still has the thirteen stripes down his back and folk call him "Striped Chipmunk."

THE HOME KITCHEN

By JEANNETTE YOUNG NORTON

Odd Dishes from All Over the World.

TRAVELING about the world, tourists have a rather confused remembrance of the foods they have tasted except those of insistent appeal. Sometimes they are tempted to ask the recipe for a dish well liked so that they may meet it again in their own home surroundings. From among these treasured mementoes we found and pass along the following:

Shrimp Pate.

The pate was enjoyed in Buenos Aires. Mound three cupfuls of sifted flour in a mixing bowl, form a hole in the center and pour into it a saltspoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of sugar, a tablespoonful of lard, a cupful of butter and the yolks of four eggs. With a knife cut the shortening through the flour and then mix all thoroughly, turn onto a floured board and cut in half-inch-thick rounds to fit muffin pans. Grease the pans and put a layer in the bottom of each. Now have prepared two glass jars of shrimp, cleaned and broken in pieces, dust with red pepper, moisten with cream sauce, then place a layer in each pan and cover with the top rounds. Brush over with butter and bake 15 minutes in a medium oven. Serve cream sauce with the pates.

Red Snapper au Gratin.

Take six fillets of the fish, or of salmon if the snapper is not in the market, brush them over with butter, dust with salt and pepper and place on a baking plate well buttered. Pour over the fillets a little well seasoned tomato sauce and dust with grated cheese. Bake for 15 minutes, or until a nice brown. This is a favorite dish in Havana.

Mushroom Canape.

This is a French favorite. Peel and break in small pieces fresh mushrooms enough to make a cupful. Saute them in a small pan in two tablespoonfuls of butter, add salt, pepper and yolk of a beaten egg. When slightly thickened spread on rounds of buttered toast and mask the top with the stiffly beaten white of the egg, set in the oven long enough to brown the egg a little then serve.

Cocoanut Soup a la Ceylon.

To a large freshly grated cocoanut add a quart of well-seasoned chicken broth from which all the grease has been removed. Simmer gently for 15 minutes then strain through a damp cheesecloth, squeeze the cocoanut quite dry, then return soup to a double boiler. Add the beaten yolks of two eggs and the strained juice of a fresh lemon, stir as it thickens slightly then remove from the fire. Add a little salt and pepper and serve with a tablespoonful of freshly boiled rice in each plate.

English Bacon Sauce.

This sauce is used over new potatoes served with young veal or Spring chicken. Fry a quarter pound of bacon diced until melted, then add a small chopped onion and a dessertspoonful of flour and fry until a delicate brown. Season with pepper, two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, and a small cupful of water. Stir as it thickens, then pour it over the freshly boiled and drained potatoes.

And what was the wisest thing this wise man said?

The wisest and greatest pronouncement of immortal Socrates was "Know Thyself."

If only we would heed these two simple words. If only we did know ourselves!

Everybody feels an urge within him to do and to dare and to achieve success, not only as good as others, but even better than most.

Every man, woman and child is really struggling to find himself. Each and every one of us is groping, reaching out.

We feel instinctively the urge, the driving force, the desire

No matter how hard the knocks, it is impossible to believe that we won't somehow at last achieve.

We instinctively know that there is a place for each and every one of us, happiness to go around, success for all.

Now how?

Follow the advice of Socrates. Recognize all your assets and also all your liabilities. Be sure also to catalogue all your possibilities.

Every individual living possesses hidden resources that can be tapped. Sometimes these treasures lie very near the surface but we know it not.

But modern science has captured and explained many of the world's most elusive problems. This puzzle of man about himself is one of them. Man has really discovered how to conquer himself.

You must examine fearlessly into every recess of your mind. You must give up being superficial and in a hurry. You must be scientific, truthful and unafraid.

Your problems do not differ so much from those of the next one after all. Maybe your emotional life is maladjusted. Maybe your personality needs developing. Maybe you are tormented by fears. Maybe you are confused.

Perhaps your vision is clouded because you have fallen into a rut.

Are you perhaps suffering from a feeling of inferiority—the thing which undermines so many?

Whatever it may be, bestir yourself! Dig down and find out. Do what Socrates said.

Find the cause, and the remedy becomes comparatively simple.

The trouble in 99 cases out of 100 is that the cause is not even suspected.

Henry Ford May Prefer the Waltz, but Jazz Has Friends

DANCING FOR ITSELF, THAT'S WHAT COUNTS

Winifred Black Loves "The Blue Danube" Just as Much as Ever But She's Not Against These New Things.

By WINIFRED BLACK

NO jazz music on the ship that Henry Ford was on. Not a single bit of jazz after the first day out.

Every night there was a dance and Henry Ford and his wife showed the young people how to dance, if you please. No jazz steps, thank you. Just the waltz and the polka and the schottische, don't you know. Two steps this way and two that and a kind of a half courtesy. Ask your grandmother, she will show you. Not so awfully bad, either, when you come to that.

WINIFRED BLACK

But oh that polka, such an awful, jerky affair!

And the old-fashioned waltz, I would like to see Henry Ford or anybody else teach that to a roomful of 1928-ers. He would have his hands and his feet mighty busy I am here to remark. You can't just walk the old-fashioned waltz, you have to dance, and you have to know how to dance, allow me to remark. A good waltzer is born only about once in a thousand, and then the good waltzer has to learn to waltz—at that.

No one, two, three, four! Nothing so easy as that, thanks.

And dear Mr. Ford, don't you remember when it was considered very naughty indeed to waltz? Didn't Byron, the wicked English poet, write some rather risky rhymes about the amorous waltz—dear, dear, I am surprised at you!

Three-Minute Journeys

Afghanistan Wild, Just Like New York.

I AM about to dispel some of your pet illusions. For I am going to tell you a little about Afghanistan. I am sure that you always, on hearing this Eastern state mentioned, pictured a wild desert region, where the people sped about the country on swift Arab steeds, wrapped in flowing burnouses. I hasten to assure you that such is far from the case.

Afghanistan is one of the most up-to-date of all Asian countries. The men and women wear, not the flowing Arab garment, but beautifully tailored clothes, and follow quite the same fashions that the American or English do. In lieu of the Arab horse, high-powered motored cars, of standard make speed the Afghans from place to place.

However, there are no railroads in the country. For political and other reasons, such form of transportation has been frowned upon. But comfortable motor buses have been provided, and judging from their popularity, seem to serve the purpose excellently. The people of Afghanistan have become so imbued with Western ideas that they are about to abandon their old, and ancient, capital, Kabul, and build a new city to take its place. This they will call Darul Aman, and it is planned to build it along Parisian lines, adapting it, of course, to the peculiarities and natural conditions of the country.

PALE pink tweed provides the material for the sport dress pictured in the accompanying sketch in which addled sleeves are fitted over a pointed blouse yoke. Four buttons appear here as on the sleeve. A patent leather belt occurs above a molded hipline and one cluster of pleats appears at the skirt front, making a completely attractive model.

Combined with it are black leather shoes and purse and a small pink felt turban banded with a narrow strip of cire ribbon.

Helpful Advice to Girls

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am writing to you for help. I am a girl in my teens, I went with a boy two years my senior last Summer. I still have dates with him secretly, because my parents object to his coming to see me. Tell me how I can have dates with him in my own home without my parents objection.

HEART-BROKEN.

HEART-BROKEN: Do your parents know this young man, dear? If they do, and still object to your friendship with him, I am afraid that you ought to abide by their decision. After all, they are older than you are, and their judgment is better than yours. I know that they would not forbid your friendship with him if there were not good and sufficient reason. However, if they have not met him, persuade them to let you invite him to your home. When they do know him, they will be able to judge for themselves whether or no he is fit company for their daughter.

KEEPING THE BREATH FREE FROM OFFENSE

Bad Odors May Be Due to Imperfect Digestion, Catarrh or Decayed Teeth, All of Which Can Be Treated.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

THERE are two things which we like to dodge. Fortunately, one of these—snoring—is practiced in seclusion. On this account we do not run amuck of it except on a sleeping car, or in a thinly partitioned Summer cottage.

But the other—bad breath—we cannot escape. A clerk in the store, a neighbor in the street car, a fellow pupil in school, and even the doctor or the lawyer may be afflicted. Hardly a day passes but from some casual contact each of us must endure at least a passing whiff of bad breath.

Many persons are painfully conscious of their own affliction. They dread to face people and may even avoid all social indulgence, because they know they have bad breath.

There are several causes for offensive breath. All of them relate to the nose, mouth and digestive tract.

Taking these organs in the order mentioned, we find that certain types of catarrh may impregnate the breath with disagreeable odors. One disease of this sort is known as "dry catarrh." Crusts and scabs form in the nose. These become the breeding place of germs and fermentation. As the material decays it becomes very offensive.

To get rid of bad breath due to catarrh there must be appropriate treatment of the nose and of the cavities, known as the nasal sinuses, which open into the nose. Special care is needed in such cases.

Decayed teeth and pus-infected tonsils are other causes for this trouble. No sensible person will neglect disturbance of mouth or throat. It is not alone to make the breath sweet that attention should be given to such defects. It should be given to guard the general health and even the very life.

Indigestion, especially those forms of indigestion associated with habitual constipation, is one of the most common causes for bad breath. A healthy baby is as sweet as a rose and the breath of a well child is like new mown hay. Let a baby or an older child suffer from gastric fermentation or constipation and the breath becomes offensive.

The last factor I shall mention is one rarely included among the causes of this disagreeable symptom. I refer to a heavily coated and offensive tongue.

Some persons have rough tongues, with very uneven surfacing. Food debris and bacterial growth lead to decay and offensive odor. Scrape the tongue with the bowl of an inverted spoon, a piece of whalebone, or a special tongue scraper. You will be surprised at the quantity of material you remove.

Keep the teeth clean. Scrape the tongue daily. Wash out the mouth and gargle the throat with some pleasing solution. With these precautions you should have sweet breath.

Love's Embers

Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

By Adele Garrison

Harry Underwood "Comes Back" with a Magnificent Act of Atonement.

THE seconds following Lillian's cry of "Harry!" as "K. seven" with the Princess Olina of Transvania in his arms, fell to his knees at the shot from Sergius' revolver, are a jumble in my memory. From somewhere I found the sense to blow the police whistle, although it was not needed, for Allen and Dicky were like tigers as they fell upon the man. He managed to shoot his revolver twice more, but they were random shots, although they made me wild with terror until I saw that Dicky had not been hit. It was not until afterward that I realized how my whole being had been centered upon that one thing. But assured of his safety, I turned back to the astonishing scene at my side. The Princess Olina was feverishly unrolling herself from the blanket swathing her, while Lillian had sunk to her knees and was cradling the unkempt red-bearded man in her arms.

"The flashlight, Madge!" she said, peremptorily. "I'm afraid he's hurt badly."

With fingers that trembled I turned the flashlight upon the man's face. He looked up at me with lips twisted with pain, but with eyes no longer blinking.

"Hello! Lady Fair," he said. "Don't let her scare you. He drilled me all right, but it isn't anything vital. However, I don't believe I'll try to walk to the house."

Harry Underwood! The red-bearded man was not only "K. seven," but he was Harry Underwood, Lillian's recreant husband. This was another instance of his atonement for the awful traitorous act, the result of months of drunken debauchery and the sinister influence of Grace Draper, which so nearly had cost Dicky's life at the Mineola aviation field during the World War. He had done his part under another name in the ambulance service afterward, and Dicky long ago had given him his friendship again. But he had been a man of mystery ever since, although he had reappeared in our lives for brief intervals, only to be gone again. And now, as I looked down into his graying face, I wondered if he were to make the last supreme atonement.

There was the sound of a swiftly revolving motor, and the next instant the headlights of the Veritzen limousine picked our group out, and the car came to a sudden stop, while from it came my employer and his chauffeur, together with Jim and my father, whom they had picked up on the way. At the same instant Allen Drake and Dicky, jerking a tightly bound but unsubdued Sergius after them, dashed up.

"Hold him, Allen," Dicky said and went down on his knees upon the other side of Lillian, while I trained the flashlight upon Harry Underwood's shoulder, from the front of which blood was flowing. It did not need medical knowledge to see that the wound was a serious one.

"Steady, old man," Dicky said, making a quick, sure emergency survey of the wound. Then he stood up and beckoned to Otto.

"You're the strongest," he said. "Help me get him into the car. Dad, you and Mr. Veritzen can help steady him. Jim help Mr. Drake with that animal if he needs it."

Even through the terror of the moment I found myself thrilling with pride at the way Dicky dominated the situation. It was a position which he kept while his old friend was laid upon a bed and given first aid by Katherine, and while a surgeon rushed from the hospital found that though the wound was painful and had resulted in much loss of blood, it was not so dangerous as to involve an operation or removal to the hospital. Then Dicky turned to my father.

"Now Dad, you can go ahead with the inquisition upon Sergius. Old Harry's going to live and everything's right with the world."

What went on behind the closed doors of my father's rooms, I did not know, did not want to know. The three men, my father, Allen and Dicky, were steeled with the knowledge of the awfulness of the plot of which this man was one of the leading spirits, and I think it was a refined but effective third degree that was used in those rooms during the next forty-eight hours. At the end of that time a thoroughly subdued, cringing man was bundled into Mr. Veritzen's limousine for a journey to the headquarters of the secret diplomatic service.

The coup had been successful. I was vaguely glad and proud of my share in it when my father declared the capture of Sergius to be the missing link of the vitally important chain which he and Allen Drake had been forging during their long and mysterious absence. But neither Lillian nor I had time or heart for anything save a cursory interest in the final clearing up of the problem, vitally important to all of us though it was. With Dicky we were helping Katherine and nurses from the hospital in the battle to keep Harry Underwood a living factor in the world to which he had so spectacularly returned. For while his wound was not dangerous, pneumonia had set in, and the battle for his life was a terrific one.

Part of the time he was delirious and his ravings were an odyssey of his wanderings in the mysterious years when he had been absent from us. Privation, suffering, danger, the indomitable determination to atone for his crime, all were revealed, coupled with a monotonous recurrence of a queerly phrased question, "Well! Lil! how about it? Will it do?"

WEALTH IN A JUNGLE

TIME has a way of playing queer tricks on us. It takes our old fables, discredited for centuries, and makes them come true.

Three or four centuries ago men believed that the Amazon basin of South America was a land of great riches. Sir Walter Raleigh outfitted an expedition for that region seeking the great city of Monaos, which, he was assured was made all of gold Spain and Portugal sent similar outfits; one and all, they never doubted that the tropical jungles hid wealth that would make the loot of Mexico and Peru look insignificant.

They never found their golden cities. They found jungles of incredible destiny, cut up by turbulent rivers, interwoven with limitless swamps, peopled by head-hunting savages who moved like ghosts among the thousand-mile forests, infested with biting and stinging insects and snakes, haunted by tropical diseases In these jungles their expeditions melted away; the survivors came back convinced that Brazil held no gold, and if it did the jungle was an impassable barrier. History accepted their verdict

But now Henry Ford, who possibly never heard of Walter Raleigh, is following in the footsteps of the old adventurers, seeking riches in the great Amazon jungle And where they failed he is sure to succeed. He is not looking for golden cities or bejeweled barbaric kings, all he wants is a tract of land where he can grow rubber trees. But he will take from the Amazon region more money than Raleigh and his compeers ever dreamed of

For the fact is that the Amazon basin is just as rich as the old adventurers thought. It has no golden cities, to be sure, but potentially it is one of the richest sections of land on the globe. For untold centuries the dark jungles have been enriching its soil. It has hot weather and rainfall its productivity would make even farmers from fertile Kansas rub their eyes Some day when capital has been invested to open it up, it will be a fabulously green garden spot.

Ford is to be the first to tap it He has a tract of land as large as Connecticut and Rhode Island combined: it is estimated that on this land he could easily grow not only enough rubber for himself, but enough for every other tire manufacturer in the United States as well. Brazil, jubilant over his coming, has given him a concession that makes him a veritable king. He will build cities and railroads engage in all manner of business: and Brazil believes that this will prove the beginning of the cultivation of the great Amazon jungles

The city of Manaos will never be found. There is no gold in the jungle. But there is tremendous wealth The old adventurers were right and so were the fables It remains for a modern business man to succeed where they failed

Dolores Costello in "OLD SAN FRANCISCO" is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Buckwell, San Francisco boss, with lawyer, Brandon, attempts to get possession of Vasquez ranch, occupied by Vasquez and beautiful granddaughter Dolores Their plot is disclosed by Terry, Brandon's nephew, who loves Dolores. Terry and Dolores have misunderstanding. Dolores falls into Buckwell's clutches, but is saved by Terry Buckwell uses force to oust Vasquez but is defeated He tries guile, but Vasquez heeds Terry's warning and confronts Buckwell. The old Spaniard dies from stroke caused by Buckwell's threats Dolores, left alone, discovers that Buckwell is Chinaman and she plans to avenge her grandfather's death.

'I know, my dear, but when he came you did not know who he was, and Buckwell is clever! He would not have such power and influence in San Francisco unless he had the ability to bend others to his will. Don't take it to heart You were not to blame," consoled Terry, cradling her hand in his

"Perhaps not, but if I had only known then that he wasn't a white man, I would have suspected something," continued Dolores

Terry started perceptibly. "Not a white man? What do you mean?" He hurt her hand without realizing his clasp had tightened

"Oh, Terry, I forgot to tell you—Senor Buckwell is an Oriental—a half caste Chinaman' I am sure of it." Terry leaned forward intently as she continued, "the day—that Grandfather died, when Senor Buckwell was here—and I accused him of being responsible for Grandfather's death—and even threatened him with the sword—he underwent a complete transition—he was terrified and kept looking at me and into the chapel—and then such a queer change came over him—he looked exactly like a Chinaman—he even mumbled something about Christian bells—and then he turned and fled as if someone was chasing him. Oh, if I could only avenge Grandfather—a Vasquez avenges a Vasquez—and I am the last of the family to do it"

Dolores paused. She was overcome with emotion and Terry silently looked at her with a far away expression Suddenly, he said grimly, "Dolores, we've got Buckwell at last! He has been delivered into your hands! Don't you see it, dear? As a white man, Buckwell has been prosecuting the Chinese—they hate and despise him even though they fear him But if he is revealed as one of their own race, they will stop at nothing to effect his ruin.' Dolores smiled slowly as the possibility became clearer to her. Terry continued, "The thing to do is to see Lu Fong the leader of the six tongs that rule Chinatown. I will see him for you and tell him what you have discovered."

Dolores shook her head proudly "No Terry—a Vasquez avenges a Vasquez—I will go with you to Lu Fong and tell him myself—tonight

"You can't do that, dear, you mustn't. It is impossible, and risky. No girl should venture into such a place I can do it for you just as well. Don't think of it—please?"

But Dolores was insistent. The chance to fulfill her obligation to her lineage thrilled her with eager anticipation and quickly pulling Terry by the hand she led him into the living room.

As soon as they disappeared from view a skulking figure arose from behind a bush near the fountain where Dolores and Terry had been sitting, and made off toward the highway to the road that led into San Francisco

It was "Jimmy" If he were to any other person it had been forgotten Not that it mattered either to him or to those that

Old San Francisco

BY ALLIE LOWE MILES

Copyright, 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

Dolores Costello in "OLD SAN FRANCISCO" is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Buckwell, San Francisco boss, with lawyer, Brandon, attempts to get possession of Vasquez ranch, occupied by Vasquez and beautiful granddaughter Dolores. Their plot is disclosed by Terry, Brandon's nephew, who loves Dolores. Terry and Dolores have misunderstanding. Dolores falls into Buckwell's clutches, but is saved by Terry. Buckwell uses force to oust Vasquez but is defeated. He tries guile, but Vasquez heeds Terry's warning and confronts Buckwell. The old Spaniard dies from stroke caused by Buckwell's threats. Dolores, left alone, discovers that Buckwell is Chinaman and she plans to avenge her grandfather's death.

'I know, my dear, but when he came you did not know who he was, and Buckwell is clever! He would not have such power and influence in San Francisco unless he had the ability to bend others to his will. Don't take it to heart. You were not to blame," consoled Terry, cradling her hand in his.

"Perhaps not, but if I had only known then that he wasn't a white man, I would have suspected something," continued Dolores.

Terry started perceptibly. "Not a white man? What do you mean?" He hurt her hand without realizing his clasp had tightened.

"Oh, Terry, I forgot to tell you—Senor Buckwell is an Oriental—a half caste Chinaman! I am sure of it." Terry leaned forward intently as she continued, "the day—that Grandfather died, when Senor Buckwell was here—and I accused him of being responsible for Grandfather's death—and even threatened him with the sword—he underwent a complete transition—he was terrified and kept looking at me and into the chapel—and then such a queer change came over him—he looked exactly like a Chinaman—he even mumbled something about Christian bells—and then he turned and fled as if someone was chasing him. Oh, if I could only avenge Grandfather—a Vasquez avenges a Vasquez—and I am the last of the family to do it."

Dolores paused. She was overcome with emotion and Terry silently looked at her with a far away expression. Suddenly, he said grimly, "Dolores, we've got Buckwell at last! He has been delivered into your hands! Don't you see it, dear? As a white man, Buckwell has been prosecuting the Chinese—they hate and despise him even though they fear him. But if he is revealed as one of their own race, they will stop at nothing to effect his ruin." Dolores smiled slowly as the possibility became clearer to her. Terry continued, "The thing to do is to see Lu Fong, the leader of the six tongs that rule Chinatown. I will see him for you and tell him what you have discovered."

Dolores shook her head proudly. "No Terry—a Vasquez avenges a Vasquez—I will go with you to Lu Fong and tell him myself—tonight."

"You can't do that, dear, you mustn't. It is impossible, and risky. No girl should venture into such a place. I can do it for you just as well. Don't think of it—please?"

But Dolores was insistent. The chance to fulfill her obligation to her lineage thrilled her with eager anticipation and quickly pulling Terry by the hand she led him into the living-room.

As soon as they disappeared from view a skulking figure arose from behind a bush, near the fountain where Dolores and Terry had been sitting, and made off towards the roadway to the road that led into San Francisco.

It was "Jimmy." If he ever had any other name it had long since been forgotten. Not that it mattered either to him or to those with whom he mingled, for one name was about as good as another and as easy to acquire. Jimmy was a typical hardboiled alley rat and with his hat pulled down over his eyes and a cigarette stuck in one corner of his lips he was no one with whom to become better acquainted. But more than that, Jimmy was a stool pigeon for the Czar of the Tenderloin—Chris Buckwell. No one knew it but Jimmy and Buckwell and that made him all the more useful to the leader of the underworld. All the gossip that was rife in the haunts of those who lived without the law found its way into Jimmy's ears and sooner or later reached Buckwell—much to Jimmy's profit and Buckwell's satisfaction. Buckwell was a hard master, but he paid well when properly served.

Jimmy knew this from past experience and chuckled to himself as he made his way toward the city. "Gee!" he thought, "the boss is sure one clever bird. Here I am tailin' these two love birds for a couple o' days and nuttin' stirrin'—and then just when I'm gettin' ready to report 'nuttin' doing'—along comes this Terry guy and wises the jane to the whole works. And me sittin' pretty takin' it all in. Gawd! but the boss oughta pony up plenty for this bit o' news." And he whistled contentedly as he walked along.

Back in his living room, in Sierra street, Buckwell sat idly mulling over the events of the last few days. His eyes had an ugly gleam as he thought of the man-handling that had been meted out by Terry, of his failure to hold the regard of Dolores, and the advisability of postponing his seizure of the Vasquez ranch. "I will make them pay!" he soliloquized, "sooner or later." The old man's death removed one obstacle, but it had also served to delay matters. He would have to lie quiet for awhile, at least until things had calmed down and been forgotten. It was a good plan putting Jimmy on the job to keep him advised of all that happened up on the hill.

It was rather a strange coincidence that Jimmy should be announced just as Buckwell had been thinking about him. He gazed uneasily at the doorway as Jimmy entered and came toward him. He could tell by the eagerness of the spy's approach that he had something important to divulge, but sat grimly at ease while he muttered a mere, "Well, what is it?"

Jimmy launched into his story without delay. "Boss, they think they're wise to you. The jane's got a nutty idea that she spotted you for a Chink the day the old man kicked in." (Buckwell flinched, but watched with tightening lips as Jimmy continued.) "She just spilled the beans to young Terry. It didn't mean nuttin' to her until he wised her what to do. They're gonna squeal to Lu Fong and are pattin' theirselves on the back that it's gonna make trouble for you. They were just startin' when I left—and by now they're wit' him unless somethin' happened."

Buckwell jumped to his feet, moistening his lips nervously.

"Jimmy," he said, "this lie might cause serious trouble. We must act quickly. Stand by me now and your fortune is made." Jimmy nodded. "And now," continued Buckwell, "you beat it pronto to Lu Fong's and keep me advised. And here take this—when you want more let me know." And he dumped a handful of gold coins into Jimmy's waiting palms.

Jimmy slid through the door like a shadow.

CHAPTER XIV

Night Life in a Chinese Cafe

A great happiness took possession of Terry—the kind of peaceful contentment that only a man in love can feel when he begins doing favors for the woman of his heart. The carriage that had brought him out to the rancho was headed back toward San Francisco's Barbary Coast, and Dolores was at his side.

They were on their way to Lu Fong's to report Dolores' discovery regarding Buckwell. To anyone who passed them on the road they were merely a remarkably handsome couple, deeply engrossed in one another and apparently enjoying an evening's drive. Nothing about them indicated tragedy and vengeance except possibly the fact that Dolores wore mourning. It was the only costume she had ever owned that was totally devoid of Spanish influence. It was essentially modern and ravishingly becoming. Terry noticed it.

"Dolores, you are beautiful!" he whispered confidingly, holding her hand on the cushion beside him. She stirred happily. "I love you with Spanish lace affairs on your head, and you carry parasols so fetchingly that I am liking them for the first time in my life, but—I prefer you in a modern hat. It makes you look more real, and I want you to be very real, dear."

"Then I shall keep my hat on all the time," laughed Dolores, pushing it down more securely on her head.

Interesting Islands

The Galapagos islands, lying about 600 miles off the coast of Ecuador, are of extreme interest to zoologists in view of the peculiarities of their fauna and the bearing the facts have upon the evolutionary history of animals. Reptiles are represented by the famous giant tortoises, two species of snakes and four of lizards.

I'M ABOUT TO LOSE SOME SLEEP

Along comes a letter from the home office saying May is National Delco-Light Demonstration Month.

And such being the case, I am urged to give as many of you folks as possible the opportunity to see what happens when bright, safe Delco-Light takes the place of dim and dangerous lamps and lanterns. Here is the way I do it. I drive out to your place with my demonstrating car, run a small wire from the Delco-Light on my car to your house and connect it to a portable table lamp. Then I sit back and say, "Just turn the switch."

Of course, I make these demonstrations at night, for Delco-Light, good as it is, can't compete with the sun. This means I lose a lot of sleep. But what I lose in sleep I make up with the fun I get out of giving you an evening of education and entertainment.

Well, May hath 27 working nights. That means I make 27 night demonstrations. Who's first? Write, phone, or call for appointment. No cost to you. No obligation. This is my party. You'll enjoy it.

P. S. Don't worry about my losing sleep. Chances are I'd lose it anyway.

Anyone buying Delco-Lighting system during month of June will receive free an electric iron and fixtures.

I'M ABOUT TO LOSE SOME SLEEP

Along comes a letter from the home office saying May is National Delco-Light Demonstration Month.

And such being the case, I am urged to give as many of you folks as possible the opportunity to see what happens when bright, safe Delco-Light takes the place of dim and dangerous lamps and lanterns. Here is the way I do it. I drive out to your place with my demonstrating car, run a small wire from the Delco-Light on my car to your house and connect it to a portable table lamp. Then I sit back and say, "Just turn the switch."

Of course, I make these demonstrations at night, for Delco-Light, good as it is, can't compete with the sun. This means I lose a lot of sleep. But what I lose in sleep I make up with the fun I get out of giving you an evening of education and entertainment.

Well, May hath 27 working nights. That means I make 27 night demonstrations. Who's first? Write, phone, or call for appointment. No cost to you. No obligation. This is my party. You'll enjoy it.

P. S. Don't worry about my losing sleep. Chances are I'd lose it anyway.

Anyone buying Delco-Lighting system during month of June will receive free an electric iron and fixtures.

Press Pays Tribute To Young Circleville Theatrical Star

BETTY COOPER, of Circleville, received more press notices in the Columbus Monday papers than any other dancer in the Eddie Powell dance revue at the Hartman theater Sunday night This minature Miss, of about five summers stole the show and was the leading topic in all the reviews of that evening's entertainment.

She even put her home town in much higher esteem, for no town after producing such as Betty, well be forgotten soon. Dancers of much more experience and training were as dim on the stage as a last year's firefly. after Betty had taken the audience by storm with her "curly locks" dance and her astonishing "caterpillar" number. Some of the excerpts from the Columbus Press follow:

No longer have vaudevillians any excuse to make jokes about Circleville, for a tiny curly-haired, tragic-eyed caterpillar came up from that much-maligned place Sunday evening and, at the Hartman theater, took part in the Eddie Powell revue, to steal honors from even such seasoned performers as Mary Louise Davis, Billie Leonard, Heft and Cummins, Eddie Rinehart and James Cupoli.

"The caterpillar's name, humanly speaking, is Betty Cooper, and remembering the praise given Drena Beach, a professional, last week, for her kick-split, we wonder what Drena would say on seeing this five-year-old acrobatic genius do the same thing—better. For besides making a human hoop of her tiny self, Betty does front overs, back overs, toe dancing and Evelyn Law stunts, and ends by raising her foot about eight inches above her head and dropping to a split. We might add that she has remarkable poise and stage presence, not lacking in personality. yet she manages to 'do her stuff' with charming nonchalance."

"Out-of-town dancers shone. Little Betty Cooper of Circleville, who hasn't been in the world more than six or seven springtimes, did an acrobatic number dressed as a caterpillar, which was only equalled by her own 'Curly Locks' number. Donald Elwell of Portsmouth was one of the best song and dance men, and Edna Orman of Lancaster, starred in two numbers."

Sacredness Of Mother's Day Holds Sway At Big Banquet

A beautiful spirit of the sacredness of Mother's Day, combined with an atmosphere of sociability, prevailed at the Mother and Daughter banquet given Monday night by the members of Mrs Toensmeier's Bible class at the Presbyterian church.

Sixty-three members and their mothers as guests were seated at four tables placed in the form of a triangle. The flowers used on the tables in baskets and bowls were double lilacs, tulips, bridal wreath and iris, in variegated colors with lavender and pink predominating. At every mother's place lay a pink or white carnation, the gift of Miss Helen Marion in memory of her mother.

Other large flower baskets in the room were filled with roses, snapdragons, gladioli and tulips. These were the gifts of friends. Mr. Toensmeier, who asked the blessing, filled the place of Mrs. Toensmeier who was unable to be present

The banquet consisted of a three course dinner prepared and served by the committee with Mrs. Will Mack as chairman who planned the menu.

Immediately after the third course, began the program, which had been arranged by Miss Abbe Clarke, and which was in charge of Mrs John Machman as toastmistress. Each member of the program was introduced by some fitting anecdote by the toastmistress. Mrs. Sidney Beechy, Mrs. Harry Heffner and Mrs. Clark Will sang solos, while Mrs. George McDowell responded to a toast from the daughters to the mothers. She spoke very feelingly of the meaning of the word "mother" and of the great debt the daughters owed their mothers, and finished with a delightful toast to all mothers in the world.

Mrs. Howard Jones provided the always appreciated humor for the evening, in her response with a toast from the mothers to the daughters. Her theme was, that the present day mother will have to step lively to keep up with the procession of their daughters, for whom she had nothing but praise for their fair mindedness, determination and ability along every line. Two of the humorous high lights of her speech were the parody on Kipling's "If," and some one's ultra modern toast she gave to the girl of the present generation —"Here's to the girl, who's pure and chaste, the purer she is, the less she's chased." Of course that was an hyperbole, and not intended to be understood literally, but it was greatly appreciated.

Underneath all of the speaker's humor however, ran a strain of what a modern mother has to accomplish before she can be called a true success.

Following this toast, the Rev. Toensmeier spoke for a few moments on the beauty and instinct of motherhood. The program closed when Mrs. Machman offered a vote of thanks to the class and the committee who had expended every effort, and made the affair such a complete success. Mrs. George Morris then rose, and expressed the appreciation of the mother guests, for whom this day in all the year is set aside.

CARD OF THANKS

We, the undersigned, wish to express our most sincere and heartfelt thanks to our many friends who in any way assisted us during the illness and death of our loving husband and father. Especially do we thank Rev. Wilkins for his consoling words, Mr. Fred Clark for his efficient service and for the beautiful floral offerings.

BETTY COOPER, of Circleville, received more press notices in the Columbus Monday papers than any other dancer in the Eddie Powell dance revue at the Hartman theater Sunday night This minature Miss, of about five summers stole the show and was the leading topic in all the reviews of that evening's entertainment.

She even put her home town in much higher esteem, for no town after producing such as Betty, well be forgotten soon. Dancers of much more experience and training were as dim on the stage as a last year's firefly, after Betty had taken the audience by storm with her "curly locks" dance and her astonishing "caterpillar" number. Some of the excerpts from the Columbus Press follow:

No longer have vaudevillians any excuse to make jokes about Circleville, for a tiny curly-haired, tragic-eyed caterpillar came up from that much-maligned place Sunday evening and, at the Hartman theater, took part in the Eddie Powell revue, to steal honors from even such seasoned performers as Mary Louise Davis, Billie Leonard, Heft and Cummins, Eddie Rinehart and James Cupoli.

"The caterpillar's name, humanly speaking, is Betty Cooper, and remembering the praise given Drena Beach, a professional, last week, for her kick-split, we wonder what Drena would say on seeing this five-year-old acrobatic genius do the same thing—better. For besides making a human hoop of her tiny self, Betty does front overs, back overs, toe dancing and Evelyn Law stunts, and ends by raising her foot about eight inches above her head and dropping to a split. We might add that she has remarkable poise and stage presence, not lacking in personality, yet she manages to 'do her stuff' with charming nonchalance."

"Out-of-town dancers shone. Little Betty Cooper of Circleville, who hasn't been in the world more than six or seven springtimes, did an acrobatic number dressed as a caterpillar, which was only equalled by her own 'Curly Locks' number. Donald Elwell of Portsmouth was one of the best song and dance men, and Edna Orman of Lancaster, starred in two numbers."

Importance of Todays

Sacredness Of Mother's Day Holds Sway At Big Banquet

A beautiful spirit of the sacredness of Mother's Day, combined with an atmosphere of sociability, prevailed at the Mother and Daughter banquet given Monday night by the members of Mrs. Toensmeier's Bible class at the Presbyterian church.

Sixty-three members and their mothers as guests were seated at four tables placed in the form of a triangle. The flowers used on the tables in baskets and bowls were double lilacs, tulips, bridal wreath and iris, in varigated colors with lavender and pink predominating. At every mother's place lay a pink or white carnation, the gift of Miss Helen Marion in memory of her mother.

Other large flower baskets in the room were filled with roses, snapdragons, gladioli and tulips. These were the gifts of friends. Mr. Toensmeier, who asked the blessing, filled the place of Mrs. Toensmeier who was unable to be present.

The banquet consisted of a three course dinner prepared and served by the committee with Mrs. Will Mack as chairman who planned the menu.

Immediately after the third course, began the program, which had been arranged by Miss Abbe Clarke, and which was in charge of Mrs. John Machman as toastmistress. Each member of the program was introduced by some fitting anecdote by the toastmistress. Mrs. Sidney Beechy, Mrs. Harry Heffner and Mrs. Clark Will sang solos, while Mrs. George McDowell responded to a toast from the daughters to the mothers. She spoke very feelingly of the meaning of the word "mother" and of the great debt the daughters owed their mothers, and finished with a delightful toast to all mothers in the world.

Mrs. Howard Jones provided the always appreciated humor for the evening, in her response with a toast from the mothers to the daughters. Her theme was, that the present day mother will have to step lively to keep up with the procession of their daughters, for whom she had nothing but praise for their fair mindedness, determination and ability along every line. Two of the humorous high lights of her speech were the parody on Kipling's "If," and some one's ultra modern toast she gave to the girl of the present generation —"Here's to the girl, who's pure and chaste, the purer she is, the less she's chased." Of course that was an hyperbole, and not intended to be understood literally, but it was greatly appreciated.

Underneath all of the speaker's humor however, ran a strain of what a modern mother has to accomplish before she can be called a true success.

Following this toast, the Rev. Toensmeier spoke for a few moments on the beauty and instinct of motherhood. The program closed when Mrs. Machman offered a vote of thanks to the class and the committee who had expended every effort, and made the affair such a complete success. Mrs. George Morris then rose, and expressed the appreciation of the mother guests, for whom this day in all the year is set aside.
